Monash University

Monash Peer Mentoring is a University-wide program that supports commencing undergraduate students as they transition to life at Monash. Mentors help a group of up to ten mentees succeed in higher education, by ensuring that they are confident in accessing support services, can establish connections with students and staff, and can participate in a full range of co-curricular and enhancement activities early in their studies.

In 2021, Soham participated as a Peer Mentor in the Monash Business School Peer Mentoring program in the Faculty of Business and Economics. Soham was competitively recruited for the role of Peer Mentor, and completed training on a range of topics.

In this role, mentors:

- organise and host group mentoring sessions that are guided by social and academic needs
- use personal university experience to provide guidance and refer mentees to academic, social and wellbeing support services
- attend and contribute to events that enhance belonging at university
- contribute to the ongoing development of the student experience through program surveys

Through active involvement in the program, mentors are able to develop the following skills:

- leadership
- mentoring
- communication
- problem identification and solving
- intercultural competence
- planning and organisation
